Key Takeaways

Branch optical cable prices typically range from $0.50 to $5 per meter, depending on type, length, and specifications.

Branch optical cables come in various types, including fiber optic, coaxial, and twisted pair, each with different performance characteristics and costs. For example, fiber optic branch cables are widely used for high-speed data transmission and long-distance connectivity, and their prices depend on whether they are single-mode or multi-mode, the number of cores, and whether they are armored or outdoor-rated. A 100-meter outdoor protected 2-core fiber optic branch cable can cost several hundred dollars, with exact pricing typically provided by suppliers upon request. Other factors affecting price include jacket material, shielding, and flame retardant properties, which enhance durability and performance in industrial or outdoor environments. Shorter patch cables, such as 2-meter LC/LC fiber optic cables, are generally less expensive, often ranging from $10 to $50 per cable depending on quality and vendor. For bulk purchases or custom lengths, suppliers like Alibaba, New York Cables, and Thomasnet offer discounts and pricing based on order volume. Shipping costs and regional availability may also influence the final price. In summary, branch optical cable pricing varies widely based on type, length, core count, and environmental specifications. For precise quotes, it is recommended to contact suppliers directly with your specific requirements.
