Key Considerations

- Attenuation Value: Higher dB attenuators (e.g., 20–25 dB) are usually priced slightly higher than lower dB units (1–10 dB).
- Connector Type: SC/UPC is standard, but SC/APC or other connector types may affect pricing.
- Warranty and Shipping: Some suppliers offer lifetime or multi-year warranties, which can influence the overall cost. Free shipping thresholds may also apply.
- Bulk Orders: Direct factory sales often provide discounts for bulk purchases, which can reduce the per-unit cost significantly. For the most accurate direct sales price, it is recommended to contact suppliers like Optcore, FiberCablesDirect, or Fiber-Life directly, specifying the required attenuation value and quantity. This ensures you receive current pricing, shipping options, and any available discounts.
